

Summer Course Offering at Cranberry Lake Biological Station

Field Ethnobotany

July 7th-19th (3 credit hours)

Dr. Robin Kimmerer

Distinguished Teaching Professor and Director, Center for Native Peoples and the Environment

A field-based introduction to the identification and traditional cultural uses of plants in the Adirondack region for food, medicine and fiber.

For more information or to register, contact the CLBS Business Manager:
clbs.esf@gmail.com

Topics:

Identification of plants

Non-timber forest products

Ethnobotanical research techniques

Medicinal plants: use and preparation

Cross-cultural perspectives on plant use

Traditional resource management techniques

Relationship between disturbance regimes and subsistence plants