BUSINESS, MANAGEMENT & ADMINISTRATION: FUNCTION — INVESTMENT MANAGEMENT

Stuart Badrigian ’11
Client Services Associate
Eaton Vance: www.eatonvance.com/

Upon graduating from Skidmore, Stuart Badrigian ’11 worked briefly at Children’s Hospital in Boston in their international relations office as a liaison for Bermuda. His responsibilities ranged from filing visa requests with the embassy to coordinating patient visits. After just four short months, Mr. Badrigian left Children’s and went to Greenough Communications, a small public relations firm in Boston. His initial work at Greenough was comprised of compiling media contact sheets and editing press releases. It was not until he had been there a couple months that he began to manage the social media accounts for many of their tech based clients. Mr. Badrigian watched traction, hits, and followers all grow as he manipulated the release of tweets and posts to times where users were most likely to be on social media sites. Every week, he sent full analytical reports to the companies whose accounts he managed. These reports also included a strategy for how we would increase the number of hits in the coming week. Although Mr. Badrigian was enjoying his work, he had always wanted to work in finance and, after four months at Greenough, he left to take a job at Eaton Vance. Eaton Vance is a Boston based Investment Management Company, and has been rated among the top 100 companies to work for in Massachusetts for the last 25 years. Mr. Badrigian’s work at Eaton Vance varies from day-to-day but he spends the majority of his time processing trades and discussing fund performance with brokers and financial advisers. Not having set day-to-day responsibilities keeps the work interesting because you never know what the day will bring. Mr. Badrigian has been at Eaton Vance for a year and a half.

BUSINESS, MANAGEMENT & ADMINISTRATION: Function – Strategy Consulting

Corey Jarecki '11
Consultant, Financial Services Strategy

Corey Jarecki ‘11 is a consultant at PwC. He is an experienced associate in the Advisory Financial Services practice specializing in strategy and focusing on the banking & capital markets and asset management sectors. While at PwC, Mr. Jarecki has been involved in various client engagements, internal strategy projects, and various proposals. His client engagements have been primarily in the risk and regulatory domain; however, Mr. Jarecki has taken on more strategy-oriented roles by reviewing processes, identifying inefficiencies, providing strategic recommendations, and designing target operating models. Mr. Jarecki also has exposure to banking strategy, mergers & acquisitions, direct to consumer lending, and international collaborative strategy. Prior to PwC, Mr. Jarecki worked in various areas within financial services and consulting, at small and large financial institutions, on projects ranging from structuring fair market value leasing portfolios to stock specific investment analysis. He worked in Brussels, Belgium, doing financial consulting and lobbying, in and out of the European Parliament. Mr. Jarecki also consulted domestically for several local businesses in Saratoga Springs. At Skidmore, he combined core ideals of business, economics, and realist philosophy, and wrote a comprehensive thesis outlining flaws of the current orientation of mainstream economics and its business implications. He focused on the limitations of mathematical deductivist modeling, its underestimation of risk, and the promotion of poor financial and business practices. His study involved two theoretical economists – Tony Lawson, Cambridge University, and Roy Rotheim, Skidmore College.

Maggie Sullivan ‘95
Manager, Human Capital Management
Capital District Physicians Health Plan: www.cdphp.com

Graduate Program: M.S. Industrial-Organizational Psychology, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute

Currently, Maggie Sullivan ‘95 is a manager of human capital management for CDPHP in Albany. Her path to CDPHP has been interesting. Ms. Sullivan graduated with a B.A. in psychology, after which, she accepted her first position as a research analyst at Four Winds-Saratoga with the plan of eventually becoming a therapist. This was a life-changing experience during which Ms. Sullivan had the revelation that she was better suited to use her psychology degree in a business environment. She ultimately returned to school to obtain her master’s degree in industrial-organizational psychology from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. Following completion of her degree, she decided to make another life-changing decision and move to Seattle, WA. Her career in human resources began when she took her first position with Radiant Research, a start-up company expanding their network of clinical drug trial operations. Since then, her career has led her to work with a variety of companies around the country such as ProBusiness, National Steel, Solucient, and Cengage Learning. Ultimately, her path led her back to upstate New York and her current role. On a personal note, Ms. Sullivan resides in the Saratoga area with her significant other and two border collies. She is an avid runner, and a few times a week makes a concerted effort to run through the Skidmore campus because she has such fond memories from college.

Dr. William Bauer ’88
Physician/Gastroenterologist
GI Associates of Northern NY: giassociatespc.com
Graduate Program: M.D., Mount Sinai School of Medicine

Dr. William Bauer ’88 decided in his first year at Skidmore that he wanted to pursue a career in the health sciences. He gravitated from psychology to sociology to biology and chemistry. They all had competing interests as Dr. Bauer was sure not to neglect his other passions including music and literature, which were also essential to his education. Graduating from Skidmore did prepare Dr. Bauer for a career in medicine, however, it was not the practical aspects of learning the basic sciences that was most valuable. It was the work ethic he developed in college that has continued to help him through his medical practice. Applying himself through work/study and residence hall staff was invaluable as he made it through his four years at Skidmore. Keeping an open mind and learning from all his experiences, good and bad, inside the classroom and off campus, prepared Dr. Bauer for life as well as for his livelihood. Skidmore's liberal arts based education was the perfect formula for his preparation for post graduate training. He trained at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in NYC. Dr. Bauer's residency in Internal Medicine was spent at North Shore University Hospital and Memorial Sloane Kettering Cancer Center in New York. He served as chief resident at his training program, overseeing the residents and interns. From there, he moved to Cleveland to attend the fellowship program in gastroenterology at the Cleveland Clinic. Dr. Bauer has published scientific articles, presented papers at national meetings, edited scientific journals, and contributed to a chapter in a textbook. He has been in private practice in Glens Falls, NY, for the past thirteen years. Dr. Bauer, his wife, and their four children have been very happy living in the Adirondacks although neither his wife nor he was from here originally.

Graduate Program: M.D., University of Massachusetts Medical School

Upon completion of his residency in pediatrics, Dr. Joshua Boyce ’81 spent a year as chief resident before spending two years in private practice as a general pediatrician. Based on his interest in asthma, he then returned to academia, completing fellowship training in pediatric pulmonology at Massachusetts General Hospital, and in allergy and immunology at the Brigham and Women’s Hospital in Boston, where he has spent the last 20 years. His clinical interests are asthma and all forms of pediatric lung disease, as well as... food allergy, eosinophilic disorders, and mast cell diseases. Dr. Boyce’s laboratory focuses on basic mechanisms of pulmonary inflammation that underlies asthma. They use a combination of cellular and molecular approaches to understand how a network of diverse lipid mediators, all derived from the common substrate arachidonic acid, interact to drive the development of asthma and determine its severity. Dr. Boyce also enjoys mentoring residents, students, and postdoctoral fellows.

Ellen Butowsky P’16
Associate Director Training & Staff Development
Prevent Child Abuse New York

Graduate Program: Dual M.P.H. and M.S.W., University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

Ellen Butowsky P’16 has served as the associate director of training and staff development for Prevent Child Abuse New York for the past seven years. PCANY provides advocacy, training, education, and referral services with the goal of stopping child abuse before it has a chance to start. Her work takes her throughout New York State providing Healthy Families NY home visiting programs with training, technical assistance, coaching, and skill building necessary for them to provide high quality services to vulnerable new and expectant families. She is also the managing editor of The Link, the statewide publication for Healthy Families NY. For 10 years, Ms. Butowsky was the director of community services for the Mid Hudson Family Health Institute, overseeing its home visiting programs. This included building community partnerships, advocating at the national and local level, grant writing, supervising staff, and working directly with participant families in their homes and in a group setting. Ms. Butowsky helped initiate a nationally recognized random control trial; this research helped justify continued funding for much needed preventive services for vulnerable children and families. In other positions, Ms. Butowsky has worked with migrant farmworkers, people living with HIV/AIDS, and homeless families. She served in the U.S. Peace Corps in southern Honduras for three years working in rural villages. She assisted women’s groups with cashew producing projects, and health and nutrition activities. Ms. Butowsky holds dual master’s degrees from UNC-Chapel Hill in public health and social work, with a focus on maternal and child health. She is very excited to share her experiences and passion with anyone interested in this work.

Camila Nardozzi ’04
Program Manager
Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT): web.mit.edu/misti/
Graduate Program: M.S. in Higher Education Administration, Syracuse University

As the daughter of two college professors, Camila Nardozzi ’04 knew that she wanted to work in higher education but didn’t want to teach. And, coming from an international family, she also wanted a career that had her on an international flight at least twice a year. After college graduation, Ms. Nardozzi moved to Syracuse, NY, and enrolled in Syracuse University’s (SU) Higher Education Administration graduate program. She received her first professional experience in international education at SU’s Study Abroad office, as admissions counselor for the Spain, Chile, and Turkey programs. Ms. Nardozzi managed the admissions process, recruiting, advising, accepting (and denying) students into these programs. She also managed the student visa processes, created and facilitated pre-departure and re-entry meetings, and was the point-person for students and parents regarding study abroad. In 2011, Ms. Nardozzi’s husband (another Skidmore alumnus) and she moved to Boston, where she began her work developing the MIT-Chile Program, which is part of MIT’s International Science & Technology Initiatives Department. As program manager, Ms. Nardozzi recruits, advises, and works closely with students, providing them with the unique opportunity of an all-expenses paid international internship at a Chilean company, international company, start-up, NGO, university, or research institute. She also designs and facilitates a series of pre-departure training sessions for students and a re-entry session upon their return. Because the internships and research opportunities are all-expenses paid, Ms. Nardozzi does a lot of networking and fundraising to keep the program running. She also manages the emergency and safety process for 20 international programs, and works closely with MIT administration in creating policies for the department. Ms. Nardozzi loves working in higher education, specifically in international education, and is happy to chat with anyone who is interested in working in international education or in higher education, in general.

Graduate Program: J.D., Rutgers University School of Law

Edward T. Dartley P’16 is of counsel in the Funds Services and Financial Services Practice Groups of Pepper Hamilton LLP. Mr. Dartley concentrates his practice on all facets of the asset management industry, with particular focuses on the alternative investment asset classes, managed accounts, venture capital and private equity funds; regulatory, compliance and operational matters; compliance audits and internal governance; family offices; and outside general counsel services. Mr. Dartley also focuses his practice on advising energy-focused alternative asset managers and companies on a wide variety of matters, and has worked with industry players in both the traditional and alternative energy industries. More recently, he has concentrated his practice on international regulatory matters affecting the asset management industry, including Europe’s new AIFMD regulatory scheme. With over a decade of experience as in-house counsel and chief compliance officer with an asset management group of registered investment advisers and private equity fund managers, Mr. Dartley has deep in-house experience and a unique perspective on how asset management works from the inside. He uses this expertise to advise managers on a diverse range of legal and business challenges faced by asset managers. In particular, he works with newly registered asset managers that are less familiar with the demands of the U.S. and international regulatory regimes, and that may not have the in-house legal or compliance expertise to meet the new regulatory challenges. Mr. Dartley is a frequent speaker at industry conferences and seminars.
