In Their Own Words:

Think outside the box in terms of your career path. A psychology major doesn't have to be a therapist, nor does an education major have to be a teacher. There are so many interesting jobs and fields that are interdisciplinary.

Think about what you want your future to look like and what would make you happy for 40+ hours a week, then start talking to professors and alumni. Chances are they can connect you to someone in a related field and you may be pleasantly surprised that your dream job does indeed exist.

On a similar note, reach out to alums! You have an incredible network of people at your fingertips, and the shared experience of going to Skidmore can open a lot of doors.

Emily Schlemmer, 2010

If you're an education major, you might find it difficult to spend a semester abroad unless you do some planning early on. That's because one full semester will be dedicated to the 'junior block' and another will be dedicated to student teaching.

I also would say: Prepare to work really hard and to be challenged. Skidmore's elementary education major is rigorous, but really rewarding. It will prepare you not only to teach, but also to communicate and to work with children in a variety of contexts.

Steve Mazza, 2007
