In Their Own Words:

When people find out that I studied philosophy and religion at Skidmore, they often ask, "How in the world did you end up in the insurance and risk-management field?" The answer is quite simple. After returning home after graduation, my mom told me I had until the end of the month to find a job; and I happened to find a customer service position at an insurance company in York, Pennsylvania. When the company had an opening in their business continuity and disaster planning department I thought it sounded interesting, so I applied and was accepted for the position.

That role sparked my enrollment and subsequent completion of an M.S. degree in emergency management at Millersville University. Since that time I have worked as the radiological hazards emergency planner for Lancaster County Emergency Management, as well as in the safety and regulatory compliance arenas at two large health systems in Pennsylvania.

As the director of compliance and enterprise risk management at Dickinson College, I get to combine all of my favorite professional activities: organizing and leading emergency preparedness exercises, as well as responding to campus emergencies; ensuring that the college is compliant with the plethora of statutes and regulations affecting higher education institutions; administering our insurance program; developing and reviewing policies; and working with some of the smartest, funniest, supportive, and inclusive coworkers that anyone could ever hope for!
