di·a·logue

noun

1. a flow of meaning between people
2. a means of mass construction

verb

1. to break silences
2. to turn walls into bridges

Each spring, the Intergroup Relations Program (IGR) offers 2-credit hour courses exploring racial identity through a unique peer-facilitated process.

"I have learned things about myself; the ways I navigate race and identity in my daily life, what factors affect my view, how I have been socialized etc. IGR has challenged me in so many ways, forcing me to really look at the many, many points where race and other aspects of life intersect, privilege, accountability, awareness and so many other things."
